

LINDBERGH HAS AMASSED CLOSE TO A MILLION

In Spite of Youth Has Stuck To Calling And Succeeded

SEVERAL AWARDS

Practically Whole Amount Comes Under "Earned Income"

WASHINGTON, Mar. 12.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, still under 27, has already amassed close to his first million.

The tow-headed boy who began his climb to fame and fortune in a mail plane at two hundred-and-something a month, has earned more in a year than most people accumulate in a life time.

All this he has accomplished without in any way forsaking the calling which made him one of the world's greatest heroes of all time.

Although he is known to have smoked one cigarette, he has never endorsed any brand. He does not have any particular style of clothing or golf balls and he wears no man's collar.

Millions in vaudeville contracts have been spurned with a snap of his fingers, and millions more in movie royalties have been left for those who go in for that sort of thing. Harassed almost to distraction by airplane manufacturers, inventors and operators who have offered millions to have him sit at their own glass-top desks, he has persisted in his determination never to capitalize his name for merely personal financial gain. Lindbergh has put all his legs in one cockpit and then given undivided attention to keeping that ship on an even keel—and the money has rolled in.

St. Louis threw $35,000 at his feet for the Paris flight. And the Pan-American flight, undertaken chiefly as a tribute to his friend and admirer, Dwight Morrow, soon after the latter moved to the United States embassy at Mexico City, further swelled his income for the year.

The Hubbard Medal Award carried $25,000 cash and a life annuity of $5,000—equal to a cash gift of more than $100,000. The Woodrow Wilson peace award, to be bestowed this month, will bring him $25,000 more. Through it all he remains a colonel in the reserve corps, the pay of which would buy gasoline for a fellow who flew less.

Lindbergh's expenses have been paid on virtually every flight since his return to America in June, but pilots who have escorted him declare his money is no good anywhere. Hotel managers, gasoline merchants and even taxi drivers refuse to accept his cash.

His more pessimistic friends declare that his life is charmed, that, try as he will, he cannot avoid the evil luck of amassing a second million soon.

Most of Lindbergh's fortune, which has congealed about him at the average rate of $100,000 a month since his Paris flight, comes under the head of "earned income"—which means work for pay at the controls of the "Spirit of St. Louis." About $300,000 has been netted by his writings.

Two series of daily flight narratives, one from Europe and one from Central America, have netted approximately $150,000 from a newspaper syndicate.

"We," the autobiography of the Congressman's son who came to be acclaimed by Congress, has been the best seller for months. Royalties already have mounted to close to $200,000 with publishers predicting a million sales before the present year is out. As an author, Lindbergh earned more last year than Sinclair Lewis and Willa Cather combined.

As a director of the Guggenheim Foundation for the promotion of Aeronautics, Lindbergh received an annuity fixed by his friends here at $100,000. His all-United States tour last fall added $225,000 more.

LIVELY CAGE CONTESTS TO BE PLAYED HERE

Fast Contests Have Been Booked for Wednesday Evening

EXPECT LARGE CROWD

Wednesday evening in Beaver Hall the basket ball fans of this section will see in action two of the fastest teams in this vicinity. The Burlington A. A. comes here with the best team that has ever represented that city. They will play the strong Keystone five and the Celtics will compete against the Burlington Reserves.

Billy Arent and Frank Cook will be at forward. This pair is yet to have someone to stop their speed and they pile up field goals like a lumberman piles boards.

"Cookie" is well known here and he was the main cog in the local football machine last year. He will leave next Saturday for spring training with the Chicago White Sox.

At center will be the best pivot man in Burlington County—Big Ad Stone who is yet to be out-jumped by an opponent. Doyle and Foster will be the guards. This group won the Burlington County Championship and has defeated the best teams in New Jersey.

The Keystone boys will place a team on the floor that will surpass by far any team that has represented that plant since its location here.

Butch Debeskey, the leading scorer in the South Jersey League, and who at the present writing is about 42 points ahead of his nearest rival, will play forward. With Butch there will be Jimmie Hopp, star forward of the Kirby's in the Trenton League. Bozo Clark will jump center and promises to make it interesting for Mr. Stone from across the river. Syd Trott and Custer put the finishing touches to a team which will hold its own with the best.

The game promises to furnish plenty of thrills for all those who witness it. In the preliminary contest the Celtics will play the Burlington Reserves.

Two From Bristol Memorial for Gen. Diaz

Saverio Atta and Gaetano Greco, of Bristol, attended a solemn memorial service held yesterday in Wilmington, Delaware, for the late Marshal Armando Diaz. They were the invited guests of the Royal Italian Vice-Consul at the service which was held in Saint Anthony's Church, 9th and Dupont streets, Wilmington. The trip to Wilmington was made by motor in Mr. Atta's car.

The service was a particularly impressive one and was attended by many high dignitaries of both church and state. The service lasted for over two hours and eloquent speakers lauded the deceased general. There were about 1,000 in attendance.

Giuseppe Zapulla, the vice-consul, was in charge of the memorial and there were 14 lodges represented, numerous Italian societies and groups of U. S. military men.

The speakers traced the history of the distinguished general from the time of his birth until death. They reviewed his participation in the great war and told of his valiant achievements.

STUBBORN BLAZE KEEPS FIREMEN BUSY 2 HOURS

Greatly Handicapped by The Conditions Surrounding The Flames

A stubborn and menacing blaze kept the Consolidated Fire Department occupied for two hours early yesterday morning at the plant of the Superior Zinc Corporation, here. Two of the firemen were slightly injured. The actual damage done by the fire was so trifling that according to the superintendent of the plant, the loss will be taken care of by the firm and it will not be reported to the insurance company.

It was about midnight when the firemen were summoned. Previous to calling them, efforts had been made by the Zinc Company's employees to extinguish the flames, but without avail.

It appears that sparks from the reports had set fire to wood work in the top of the smelting plant. This wood work is covered on the outside by heavy corrugated iron and a slate roof. When the firemen arrived they were handicapped in fighting the flames on the inside due to the collection of carbon-monoxide gas in the top of the building and also an accumulation of zinc dust which flew back into their faces when water from hose lines struck it. It was dangerous to ply water inside due to the fact that the reports were in operation and there might have been an explosion had any quantity of water struck the red hot metal.

The roof was decidedly slanting on the outside and firemen had to make supreme efforts to get to the seat of the blaze. Ladders were lashed together and used as hose towers, and after two hours of hard work the blaze was extinguished.

Captain Joseph Buck, Engine Company No. 2, got metal dust in his right eye, and Nick Giagnacovo fell into a hole and sprained an ankle. Buck was treated in the office of the Zinc Corporation and then later taken to the hospital for additional treatment. It is not thought that the injury to his eye will prove serious. Giagnacovo was about yesterday.

The blaze was so high up on the inside of the factory that the 55-foot extension ladder had to be brought into play. The firemen did good work in checking the flames under such difficulties.

Mr. Swan was in Bristol on a visit last year.

COUNTY FIRE LOSS IN THREE MONTHS REACHED $14,800

Six Houses Were Destroyed In One Week In January

FORTY-SIX FIRES IN ALL

Reveals Investigation of Suspicious Blazes In The County

Fire loss in Bucks County during the three-month period ending March 10th amounted to $14,800, according to figures given by Bucks County Fire Marshal, William K. Stackhouse, at a meeting of the Bucks County Firemen's Association held in Silverdale Saturday night. "The amount of the insurance was $54,000 and the value of the property at risk is estimated at $2,000,000. There was 46 fires."

The large value placed upon the property at risk is due to the fact that there were two fires in Quakertown's business center and the one in Doylestown's business district last week.

Chief VanBuskirk, Doylestown, told the story of the Doylestown fire of last Friday and said that the loss would amount to between $60,000 and $65,000.

There were about 325 men at the meeting and President James E. Groome presided. The address of welcome was by Clinton Rice, president of Silverdale company, and the chairman of the Perkasie department spoke.

County Fire Marshal Stackhouse reviewed the trial of Gray before Judge Ryan and his sentence. He also reported that during the week of January 18th there were six houses destroyed by fire in Bucks County.

Stackhouse also told of his investigation both before and after the fire at Parkland a few weeks ago when two bungalows owned by Miller and MacIver, South Langhorne, were destroyed. He said:

Having had their suspicions aroused, authorities had, on two occasions, visited the premises. The first visit was on a Tuesday night and they were astonished when they found bed clothing gathered into a heap on top of a mattress in the Miller bungalow. Near the bed clothing there had been arranged a fuse at the base of which was an oil soaked rag and a box of matches. The fuse burned itself out before the authorities arrived and the attempt to ignite the properties had failed.

Having had their suspicions confirmed by the conditions which they found on Tuesday night, that there was something irregular going on about the two properties, the authorities returned to the properties on Wednesday night and found that another attempt had been made to burn the properties. The second attempt, like the first, proved unsuccessful. Upon their arrival at the properties on Wednesday night they found conditions substantially as they had been on Tuesday night except that a new fuse had replaced the partly burnt one of Tuesday night and that a comic supplement of a Sunday paper had been spread out so as to be easily ignited, and a new box of matches placed at the base of the fuse.

The following Friday night both bungalows were destroyed.

Reports of the Association's progress were submitted by the secretary, financial secretary, treasurer and the trustees. It was voted to increase the salary of the financial secretary from $35 to $50 and that of the recording secretary from $20 to $35.

Following nominations were made for officers to be elected at the June meeting:

President—James E. Groome, Yardley; Franklin Gilkeson, Bristol; Howard Deeter, Newportville.

Vice-president—Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville; Grover Yeagle, Bristol; Robert Landis, Quakertown; Lloyd Crouthamel, Dublin; Albert Summers, Bristol. Three to be elected.

Trustees—Winfield Cox, Morrisville. Recording secretary—William K. Kroun, Perkasie.

Financial secretary—Fred Sherman, Newtown.

Treasurer—Louis Leedom, Yardley. Fire Marshal—William K. Stackhouse.

Chaplain—Rev. Francis Morrow, Tullytown.

Plans for the annual convention and parade to be held at Perkasie on June 8th and 9th were discussed and indications point to a big affair.

There were 27 companies represented and Trevoise joined the association. About 30 from Bristol attended the meeting.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Bucks County Firemen's Association met in an adjoining hall and was presided over by Mrs. B. Harvey Smith, Sellersville, as president. There were about 110 women in attendance.

A play entitled "Pink Tea" was very favorably presented by a group of 11 women from Hulmeville.

Mrs. John Praul, of 531 Maple street, was operated upon for appendicitis at the Harriman Hospital, on Friday, and is reported as doing well.

ALL CAN HELP

Business is after all a reciprocal matter. Stores are not alone for the merchants who own them nor are they only for the people who trade with them. Without the other the merchant cannot sell and the customer cannot buy. And reasoning in the negative, if the merchant does not satisfy the customer the customer will trade elsewhere, and if the customer trades elsewhere the merchant is deprived of the opportunity of striving to satisfy the customer.

By trading at home with the home town merchants the people of Bristol become the architects of their own business places. They create the demand and the home town merchant, assured of the demand, does not fail in meeting it. It is always more convenient to trade at home, and assured of your trade the home town merchants will find it quite convenient to meet every merchandise wish.

Every citizen of Bristol is interested in the growth and improvement of the community, but many of those who trade out-of-town do not realize that community improvements begin with the improvement of its business. The business of a town or city is its life-blood. Knowing this no citizen will stunt the natural and deserving expansion of his home town while fostering that of another community and its business.

If it must be done in a spirit of selfishness, don't buy at home to help the merchant, but to help the home community and yourself. Thrust your business upon the local merchants and force them to prosper, that they, prospering, will make the community prosper and bring more prospering merchants and buyers into town to increase competition and through competition reduce prices, and increase quality and stocks to choose from.

SAFETY IN CHECKS

One of the subjects most prolific in the way of texts for comment is that of the safety provided by banks to persons to engage in financial transactions of any kind. Many more persons should adopt the plan of making payments of all kinds by checks instead of in currency.

Every few days the newspapers publish accounts of thefts which have been committed in cases of persons who withdraw sums of money from the banks, or use money they have kept in their homes for payments on property or other transactions.

A bank check eliminates all possibility of loss of money in making payments. Bankers are particular to know that persons presenting checks for payment are entitled to the money, and even if a check is stolen it is highly improbable that it can be negotiated by the thief. Banks require identification before making payment on checks, and the writer of the check can immediately stop payment on it if it is stolen.

Persons who keep money in considerable amounts in the home do so at their own risk. Would-be thieves have means of securing information which may not be suspected by the person who keeps money in his home, or they may even take a chance of finding currency hidden about the house. The resulting loss is the same.

There is no reason why any individual should draw currency from the bank when a check will complete a financial transaction; neither is there any excuse for a person who receives money undertaking to be his own banker.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

Following the death of the late ex-Judge Harmon Yerkes the following was published in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin:

Ex-Judge Harman Yerkes, who until his retirement from the Bucks County bench in 1904 presided frequently in the Philadelphia courts, was one of the most highly esteemed of the visiting Judges. He had been drafted for emergency service in Quarter Sessions here long before passage of the act systematizing the employment of jurists from other districts.

Thus it was Judge Yerkes who in the spring of 1896 conducted the trials of rioters who were prosecuted for participation in the great strike of trolley men in 1895. The sentences he passed on convicted rioters were accounted severe, and the Philadelphia Judges were criticized in some quarters for unduly shirking a disagreeable responsibility. But on the other hand it was pointed out that the men who had thrown brickbats and cobbles through car windows were mostly non-strikers and rowdy sympathizers or professed sympathizers who had no connection with the unions.

Another notable trial before Judge Yerkes, in 1896, was that of Alphonse Catala for the murder seventeen years before of his aunt, Joanna, wife of "Jimmie" Logue, an old-time burglar. His opinion a few weeks later, deciding against the learned and eloquent argument of Hampton L. Carson for a new trial, was a closely reasoned and vigorous exposition of a trial Judge's duty to sustain a jury's verdict whenever possible, and the probative value of circumstantial evidence. Soon afterwards he presided at the trial of James B. Gentry, an actor who was convicted of the murder of an actress.

Judge Yerkes' long and active life in politics covered practically the whole history of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania after the Civil War. At twenty-six he was sufficiently a leader in his own community to be sent as a delegate to the Baltimore convention that nominated Horace Greely for President. Lawyers generally felt that Judge Yerkes was qualified to sit in either the Superior Court or the Supreme of Pennsylvania to which he was successively nominated by the Democratic party. But politics barred his election.

He had served as president of the Scotch-Irish Society, and he was a member of both the Pennsylvania German Society and the Huguenot Society of Pennsylvania.

He is entitled to the lasting gratitude of the whole Commonwealth for his energy in founding the Bucks County Historical Society with its museum and valuable collections in their imposing home. He also wrote many original papers embodying the results of his researches in colonial and Revolutionary history relating to that region.

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS
The New York Ghetto seethes in preparation for its important holiday, Yom Kippur. Cantor Rabinowitz, who has taught his son, Jackie, the Hebrew songs, preparing him to be a Cantor also, is horrified by the child's statement that he wants to sing in a theatre. That afternoon the Cantor discovers that Jackie is already singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips his son and the boy runs away from home on the Eve of the Day of Atonement. Ten years elapse and the scene changes to a vaudeville booking office in San Francisco. An actress is crashing the gate of the manager's sanctum.

"Is that so?" The blonde reached out a hefty arm and swept the boy to one side. "Not to me he ain't." Without stopping to knock she threw open the door to the inner sanctum and disappeared banking it behind her.

The boy stared, open-mouthed. The waiters glared hopelessly, wondering. The boy watched after the departed figure for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and sat down. He pulled a piece of paper from the desk drawer, inserted it in the typewriter before him, and languidly hammered the keys. "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party," he wrote over and over again. Silence, save for the click-click of the machine, brooded once more over the room.

A very obvious Actor—spelled through his Shakespearean looks, flicked a speck of dust from his too-many-times-pressed suit, and shook his head. A pair of pretty twins in short, organdie dresses, who had arrived some hours before giggling irrepressibly, settled down once more to face stern reality and resume their haggling over a cross word puzzle. A young man, slightly pudgy, with a suit that had once been well tailored but which now showed the effects of travel—and not particularly de luxe travel—decided to snatch forty winks of sleep betimes.

Again the door opened, this time to admit a personable young man, obviously down on his luck. It was evident that he had made an attempt at spruceness, but his shiny suit told their own story. He paused, gazing irresolutely about the room, and then hesitatingly walked to the railing in front of the desk. The office boy assumed a greater interest in his work, not deigning to glance at the new arrival. The applicant cleared his throat nervously.

"I'd like to see Mr. Schuler, please," he began.

"Can't be done," snapped the boy, not lifting his eyes from his work. "He's in an important conference."

The young man turned slowly and swallowed a lump in his throat. It was just another turn down, and he should be getting used to them by this time, he thought. But even ten years of hunting jobs had not quite hardened his sensibilities. Ten long years and three thousand miles of weary travel from the Ghetto could work many changes, however—and had. It was a long jump from Jackie Rabinowitz to Jack Robin and it had taken the ten years and three thousand miles to make the jump. And so the little Jackie Rabinowitz that was swallowed hard, and the Jack Robin of the now looked about for a chair in the Star Vaudeville Circuit, San Francisco Branch offices.

The pudgy, not-so-well-dressed young man, had been staring at the newcomer. And now, as Jack Robin turned, the man jumped up from his chair and held out his hand.

"Well, it ain't my old partner from the sticks," the pudgy young man laughing and pumping Jack's hand up and down with tremendous gusto.

"Buster Billings! Well, what th'—what are you doing here?" Jack grasped his friend's hand with an equal heartiness.

"Same thing you are, Huntin' a bookin'. How'd you get here?" he demanded.

"Long story, Buster," Jack returned. "Gee, its great seeing you again. Let me see. Last time I saw you, you were getting ready to climb a side door Pullman out in Cheyenne."

"Yeh, that's right," Buster laughed at the memory. "Ran onto a streak of hard luck down in Texas after that, and walked the ties for a while. Then I found an ol' pal puttin' on a song an' dance act out in Albuquerque an' he put me wise to a joint, 'Shilverin' Sal's Place'—ever hear of it?"

Jack shook his head.

"Some joint, believe you me," Buster continued. "But I got a work-out there, and they took me on for a comedy monologue in the cabaret. I got my notices all right an' a good break, but I was itchin' for 'Frisco, an' soon's I got enough Jack ahead I beat it. Spent most of it playin' Seven-Up on the train, though," he added, laughing.

"Where've you been?"

"I had a couple more weeks after you left, and then I was out. I got a job singing 'mammy' songs in a cafe, but it didn't go over so big. About that time I decided I'd better move on, so I hopped a train for Santa Fe. Thought maybe I might get some kind of a booking there, but—nothing, nothing. I got lots of presses, but I couldn't eat them. Money, ran out—well, you know that story."

Buster nodded sympathetically. "I sure do," he grinned.

"Well, anyhow, I started to walk. I wanted to make 'Frisco myself, but I landed in Phoenix."

"Great little town—not!" Buster interrupted.

"Oh, I got a job there, anyhow," Jack went on. "One of these night life places where there was plenty of night and not so much life. But I caught up with a little money, and then the place went bust. I took to tramping the streets again, but it was coming summer and there wasn't a thing to be had anyplace. I lasted through, but I was on my uppers by fall. Just about that time I heard of a show that was going out."

"Pretty tough, kid," Buster commented.

"Well, to make a long story short I got hold of the manager and he talked cold turkey," Jack explained, "and after a week's rehearsal we headed for the sticks—and when I say sticks I don't mean maybe. I think we played every town hall in Arizona, Utah and Nevada. And how!"

"Don't," groaned Buster. "I know. I've been there myself, an' I hate to be remembered of them little unpleasant things. Ever strike Escalante, Nevada?"

"Did I?" Jack nodded sorrowfully. "What a town. There were three people in the audience, and not one of them cracked a smile."

"An' the Edwards House? What a joint! Did you stay there?"

"Did we stay there? Say, all we did was sleep when we could on the trains—and no sleepers for our outfit. We sat up."

"Oh, well, its all in the game," Buster philosophized.

"Sure," Jack agreed. "Well, anyhow, we finally got as far as Sweetwater, Nevada, and the winter was pretty near gone. And I thought I was in luck because, even though I'd only been getting third a week and pay my own expenses, I'd managed to keep the job going. But as I started to say, we got to Sweetwater, and our next jump was Calder, Cal. We got on the train that night—or about two in the morning. No one looked around for the manager—he wasn't so popular, anyhow, and when we woke up in Calder the boy friend was minus."

"Skipped?" Buster questioned laconically.

"Sure, and it was Saturday and pay day. He just beat it and left the whole C. O. flat. Stranded! And how. Well, we didn't have drop, and nothing to heck. So we had to get out the best way we could. I headed for Frisco. Picked up some lifts along the way and some meals from farm houses, and landed in here yesterday. Say, think there's a chance of anything doing here?"

Buster shook his head wearily. "I been comin' over here the last four days an' this guy ain't seen no eye yet."

"That's not so hot," Jack commented.

The pair sat in silence for a time.

"O, by the way, there's a friend of yours playin' here," Buster smiled slyly.

"Friend of mine? Who?" Jack asked, coming to with a start.

"Mary Dale."

Jack colored and looked out of the window.

"$12000 to build—$15000 to re-build, insure for today's value."

Far too many home-owners make the mistake of insuring for the original value instead of for the present-day replacement cost. Re-building is the big service of fire insurance. Insure for full value so that you can rebuild if fire comes.

There is no surer protection than a policy in the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. Let this agency estimate the cost of replacing your home, and show you how little Hartford protection costs.

This is your agency of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

Buick offers you far more than fleet, low, dashing lines . . . It provides all of the distinction of smart, low-swung bodies by Fisher with the additional advantages of generous head-room and road-clearance.

This remarkable combination of modish, graceful beauty—maximum head-room—and ability to clear the ruts—is the direct result of the Buick double-drop frame.

This brilliant advancement, pioneered by Buick months ago, places Buick far ahead in beauty, safety and all-around roadability.

GREENVILLE, Pa., Mar. 9.—(INS)—Companionate marriages are not approved by the student body of Thiel College, according to a consensus of opinion available here today from questionnaires issued to the undergraduates. Taking a majority of answers as indicative of Thiel's opinion, here's what the students think on other things:

Hickman Hoover, secretary of commerce, was the popular choice for president. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes and Gov. Al Smith, of New York ranked second and third respectively.

The Eighteenth Amendment "has been and probably will be unsuccessful." Half of those students who declared in favor of the amendment recommended modification.

The "Fox" William E. Hickman, was named when he killed Marion Parker.

The American policy of intervention in Nicaragua was condemned.

The "honor system" among students is effective.

Last but not least—there should be no scholastic examinations.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Mar. 12 (INS)—Miss Mary Hunter, teacher at a rural school here, is believed to have one of the smallest classes in the state. It consists of two pupils, the only children of school age in the district. Recitations for the class are held in a one-room building capable of accommodating 30 pupils.

HARRIS TAKES PART BLAME FOR DEFEATS

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with training camp developments in connection with the major league ball clubs. Other articles of the series will follow.)

By Davis J. Walsh
(L. N. S. Sports Editor)

TAMPA, Fla., Mar. 10.—They called him the boy manager when he was winning pennants several years ago but today he was a man and he proved it as only a real man can by declaring that he himself, Stanley Harris, was more than a little to blame for the fact that the Washington Senators weren't a better ball club last year. It may not have been a strictly accurate estimate of the situation but he made it and he meant it and that, after all, is where the line at the pay window starts.

"Success," he said, with that depreciating smile of his, "may have gone a little to my head," and let it go at that.

Having lifted that vest-full from his abdomen, the first baseball man ever to admit publicly that a mistake was all his next turned his attention to the New York Yankees, who are one of the things to which you turn your attention at the slightest provocation or none at all. He doesn't think that the Yankees are a kick-in for the pennant as the current version would have it and cites as his reasons the following:

- 1.—The Washington Senators.
- 2.—The Yankees' elderly pitchers.
- 3.—The conviction that Ruth and Gehrig will not repeat their 1927 records.
- 4.—The Washington Senators.
- 5.—The belief that the Yanks got all the breaks last year and none of these happened to be bones.
- 6.—The Washington Senators.

Quite so, Mr. Harris, with remarkable self-control is able to view the Washington Senators with almost no hatred. He thinks well and kindly of the Senators it seems and they think well of him. It is only when the question of the Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics arises that kindness is allowed to run in the outside lane. It appears that he conceded the former nothing and gives the latter slightly less. He didn't so say but I gathered that he somewhat disdains the venerable gentlemen of Philadelphia.

The Senators? Well, just a better ball club, my good fellow, and right here, I want to say that I live only for the day when some manager will inveigle me into the clothes press to tell me in the spring that his club is worse, much worse.

Seemingly, there are only two abiding questions that the Washington club must answer this year and they deal with the matter of whether the outfit has a shortstop and a center fielder to take the place of Tris Speaker. The rest of it seems to be almost fool-proof.

At the moment Sam West of Rochester, Tex. is in there making them forget Speaker; that is, they no longer remember him for the entire twenty-four hours. Samuel, with the club last year, has failed to hit the ground with his bat down here. He, however, is getting the play because he is a better outfielder than either Foster Gangel or Emile Barnes, Birmingham, Ala., citizens both.

At shortstop, another great Alabama man, Grant Gillis, is giving Boob Reeves, the regular, quite a rally. So is one M. C. Hayes, of Clanton, Alabama, and Birmingham. Harris says Hayes reminds him of Lazzari when Tony came up two years ago.

Irving Hadley is at a local hospital, laughing merrily off an operation for appendicitis but Harris declares he will be ready by mid-April. Hadley and Lisenbee were two outstanding recruit pitchers of 1927. Milt Gaston, obtained from the Browns, is another big shot down here. Another regular right hander will be the veteran Fred Marberry, to say nothing of the even more aged Sam Jones. The place is simply overrun with left handers and all of them, according to Harris, are good.

Muddy Ruel and Henry Tate will be the catchers, as of yore. Hugh Mullin, former giant, is back from Louisville, and this time, he expects to hit better by batting only as a right hander. A fourth catcher is Al Cooper of Flat River, Mo., and Birmingham. If he doesn't care to remain in either place, he can take the matter up with McMullen.

Harris and Ossie Bluege, perforce, will play second and third base, respectively, and Goose Goslin and Sam Rice left and right field, respectively. And, oh yes, Walter Johnson won't be with the club this year. This fact was duly discovered by an enterprising reporter several days ago.

The 5 Great Hazards

"It has been in this house fifty years. You can't find another piece like it. This, ladies and gentlemen, is genuine! What am I offered for it? These old treasures are going for a song. Give me a bid."

—As the auctioneer rattles on, the neighbors think of the old days of entertainment and open hospitality in that house. They wonder how long the proud and lonely mistress has been fighting off the inevitable.

WHILE presenting our Annual Statement showing Assets of $2,388,647,636—2 Billion, 388 Million Dollars—representing savings and investments of 25 million people in the United States and Canada, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company desires to make clear what a life insurance company can do, what it should do and what, so far, it has been unable to do toward meeting what have been called the five great hazards of life:

Death

which may come early, before one's dependents have been provided for.

Accident

always sudden and often causing lessened earning power.

Sickness

which may cause want as well as suffering.

Dependent Old Age

which must seek charity if self-support is no longer possible.

Unemployment

which may bring distress to others in addition to the one unemployed.

Annuities for old age, protection in case of death, accident or sickness—almost every financial requirement can now be met by insurance. Only one problem is still unsolved—unemployment insurance—and that only because legislation permitting it has so far been refused. The day must come when every family can and will plan to meet every one of the five great hazards so that none of its members will ever face the need of charity.

The United States and Canada pay higher wages than other countries. Nearly all their workers earn enough to provide for both present and future needs. If they will but plan ahead they may have in their years of retirement, not merely bare existence, but real comfort.

Thousands of those interested in life insurance have asked how the family income should be expended. Send for our Home Budget Booklet which tells how much should be spent for necessities—food, housing, clothing, fuel—and how much should be laid aside for protection. It will be mailed free.
